

“Funerals and memorials are important. Something profound happens when others see and hear and acknowledge our grief. Mourning is the outward expression of our grief. Conversely, something goes wrong when it remains unseen. That’s why I believe that when someone decides not to have a funeral, they’re missing out. A funeral is the time for people to gather as a family, as a community, to witness grief together. The funeral is the most well-known ritual for death, a ceremony that creates meaning out of our loved one’s experience of life, and our own experience of loss.”

Funerals Help Us Grieve

“Funerals that are timely, rich in elements, inclusive of many people, and highly personalized put griever on the right path. Such funerals launch healthy mourning; they do not mark the end of it.”

Alan Wolfelt, Ph.D., Director of the Center for Loss and Life Transition

In the immediate aftermath of a death, family members and other loved ones want and need to connect. Sharing memories, tears and laughter helps the bereaved process their loss and strengthen the bonds that lead to healing. When loved ones are separated at this critical time, however, mourning takes place in isolation and can lead to complicated, unresolved grief.

TribuCast® makes it seamless and simple for you and your loved ones to mourn together, regardless of situation or location. Through our private funeral livestreaming platform, loved ones can not only attend the service remotely, but also find comfort in the same shared memories, including:

- ✦ Service program and prayer cards
- ✦ Eulogies, family stories and tribute videos
- ✦ Photographs and music
- ✦ Condolences using the TribuCast® Guest Book

These touch points help bring you and your loved ones closer together as you all begin the healing process.

How TribuCast® Works

Thoughtfully designed with your family and loved ones in mind

TribuCast® provides family and loved ones with a private and personalized web page through which they can watch a funeral remotely from anywhere in the world there is sufficient internet. This highly individualized page enables remote attendees to sign and read the guest book, view photos, read remembrances, and, of course, follow the program while watching the funeral live. Remote attendees can also visit their loved one's TribuCast® page before the service begins and view the service again after its conclusion.

Experience You Can Trust

Over the course of thousands of services, TribuCast® has proven itself to be the premier choice for funeral livestreaming. We take pride in providing family and loved ones with a private, dignified and meaningful way to grieve collectively, regardless of location or circumstances.

You're Not Alone

9 out of 10 services have loved ones who cannot attend

By including TribuCast® in your plans, you can hold the service as soon as possible, when it can provide the greatest support, and begin the healing journey for all those who share in your loss.

TribuCast® can help ease the stress for mourners with:

- ✦ Health or other issues that make travel difficult
- ✦ Military, caretaking or work commitments
- ✦ Limitations due to hospitalization or long-term care

An Enduring Tribute

Preserving memories for future generations

A TribuCast® can be viewed live or at a later date and includes a guest book for those attending remotely to share their thoughts, memories and condolences.

Your funeral home understands what you and your loved ones are going through. They can help you personalize your TribuCast® so that it fully captures the spirit and interests of your loved one.

Please speak with your funeral director to learn more about how to add a TribuCast® to your loved one's service.
